

ASSISTED SUICIDE AND TOURISM: COUNTRY PRACTICES

Gizem Zevde AYDIN¹¹ Ondokuz Mayıs University, Faculty of Health Sciences, Department of Health Management

ARTICLE INFO	ABSTRACT
Article Type: Traditional Compilation Keywords: Assisted suicide, Physician assisted suicide, Suicide, Suicide tourism Corresponding Author(s) Gizem Zevde AYDIN Adress: Ondokuz Mayıs University, Faculty of Health Sciences, Department of Health Management, Samsun/ TURKEY E-mail: gizemzevde.aydin@ omu.edu.tr	Suicide tourism is a topic that has arisen with several controversial questions of its own, arousing curiosity and gaining increasing interest in some countries. It is also becoming one of the critical issues in ethical terms due to the increasing assisted suicide demands. Assisted suicide is generally defined as any action taken to help a person kill herself/himself. Suicide tourism refers to the travels made for assisted suicide. The decline in the quality of life due to aches, pains, or injuries that cannot be ignored may cause people not to prefer an unqualified life and desire death. There are assisted suicide service organizations in the world that operate to provide assisted suicide service and provide that they meet the specified conditions. This study is a compilation and aims to provide information on suicide tourism and assisted suicide, the legal framework of the concepts, and international organizations that provide services. The study aims to form a basis for future research on the subject. The study is essential in terms of shedding light on a controversial issue.